

We here at Dada keep careful tabs on the calendar-- we like to be in the know. For example, our lives feel much more enriched for knowing that July is National Bikini Month, as well as National Hot Dog Month.

But do the noble Ballpark Frank and the even nobler itsty bitsy teeny weeny yellow polka dot bikini really require an entire month devoted to their appreciation? We appreciate them plenty already! And that's why we were so tickled to learn that July is also, officially, National Home Inspector Appreciation Month.

Have you appreciated your Home Inspector lately? Think about it. Your foundation hasn't caved in, your walls haven't collapsed, your roof hasn't imploded (hopefully): all thanks to the due diligence of your home inspector. And that's worthy of a little appreciation.

And what better way to say thanks than to invite your favorite Home Inspector to a Something Dada show? Together we can all bring the walls down laughing (although don't tell him that joke, he might find it in poor taste.)

So grab your home inspector (gently) and bring him down to the Tower Press Building. We promise to bring the funny.

Something Dada strongly suggests not bringing children under 13 to our shows. We generally operate at a PG-13 level, in terms of language and content, but we can not guarantee what suggestions will be given, or what direction the show will take (it is improv, after all).
